The Funds are actively managed by DJE and, where a benchmark index is indicated, without reference to it. The presented charts and tables concerning performance are based on our own calculations according to the gross performance (BVI) method<sup>2</sup> and illustrate past development. Past performance is not indicative for future returns. The BVI method takes into account all costs incurred at the fund level (e.g. management fees), the net performance and the issue fee. Additional individual costs may be incurred at the customer level (e.g. custodian fees, commission and other charges). Model calculation (net): an investor wishes to purchase shares for Euro 1,000. With a maximum issue surcharge of 0.00%, he has to spend a one-off amount of Euro 0.00 when making the purchase. In addition, there may be custodian costs that reduce performance. The custodian costs are decided by your bank's price list and service charges

Investment Approach

The focus is on bonds with short residual maturities, good liquidity and high-quality credit ratings. The strategy focuses on corporate and government bonds, mortgage bonds, profit participation certificates, zero-coupon bonds and variable-interest debt instruments. The DJE - Short Term Bond achieves a low currency risk by investing predominantly in EUR securities, whereby part of the fund assets can also be invested in foreign currency bonds. Active duration management using interest rate derivatives and management of residual maturities reduces the risk of interest rate changes. The balanced portfolio and the investment horizon geared to short maturities intends to avoid major fluctuations in the strategy and achieve a stable performance.

Monthly Commentary

The bond markets performed very unevenly in May. The main reason for this was the expectations of interest rate cuts in the US, which first emerged and then faded again from the middle of the month. The US Federal Reserve (Fed) announced its intention to sell fewer government bonds and thus to take a somewhat less steep path for its quantitative tightening in future. At the same time, Fed Chairman Jerome Powell said that an interest rate hike was unlikely to be the next step. In addition, the inflation rate fell more sharply than expected in April from 3.5% to 3.4% and core inflation (excluding food and energy) from 3.8% to 3.6% - both compared to the previous year. This rekindled hopes of interest rate cuts by the Fed before the end of the year, especially as the markets have firmly priced in a key interest rate cut by the European Central Bank in June. In the eurozone, however, the purchasing managers' index for the manufacturing sector in the eurozone rose surprisingly from 45.7 to 47.3 points. Although this means that the index is still below the threshold value of 50 from which an expanding economy is to be expected, the sharp rise was achieved even without an interest rate cut. In addition, wages in the eurozone rose, which will contribute to inflation in the long term. And in May, inflation in the eurozone rose again from 2.4% to 2.6% year-on-year. Core inflation also rose from 2.7% to 2.9%. While there had been hopes of several interest rate cuts by the ECB prior to these figures, the markets revised these expectations somewhat. The bond markets reacted very differently to this. In Europe, yields on high-quality government bonds rose slightly. At 3.10%, yields on 2-year German government bonds were 6 basis points higher than in the previous month. In contrast, yields on their US counterparts fell by 16 basis points to 4.87% because Powell said an interest rate hike was unlikely. The yield on high-quality European corporate bonds remained virtually unchanged from the previous month at 3.92%, while their US counterparts were 21 basis points lower at 5.52%. European high-yield bonds benefited the most from the prospect of a key interest rate cut by the ECB in June. Their yield fell by 34 basis points to 6.61%, while that of their US counterparts fell by only 11 basis points to 8.00%. Against this market backdrop, the DJE - Short Term Bond rose moderately by 0.04%. The fund benefited above all from the narrowing of risk premiums on high-yield European corporate bonds. By contrast, the performance of US bonds was negatively impacted by the weaker US dollar. Over the course of the month, the fund management reduced US Treasuries and sold two corporate bonds from the utilities and infrastructure sectors in order to take profits. On the other hand, it bought a Polish government bond in order to further diversify the bond spectrum and currency exposure. As a result of the adjustments, the fund's investment ratio fell from 96.10% to 94.36%. The modified duration (including cash and derivatives) rose from 1.99% to 2.04%.
